The Almost April Fools Day issue!!

by Steven Saint

OK, OK! Life is serious and news is serious and we get to be the reality check for Lemon Grove twice a week.

But wait a minute! Reporters want to have fun, too.

So we had April Fools Day Tuesday, and instead of writing real stories, we just made a few up. Well, almost. The columns are real. The advertisements are real. The Letters to the Editor and police and fire logs are real, too.

Everything else is fair game.

Historically speaking, it seems April Fool's Day had no definite starting point, like Christmas or 4th of July. Rather, April Fools Day appears to have had a slow evolution toward modern day.

It seems to be the result of the convergence of various cultural beliefs and practices which held a common theme: the emergence from the doldrums of winter.

The first of April is recognized as a day of pranks not only in the United States, but also in France, Germany and Great Britain.

In India, the feast of Huli occurs in March. The final day of Huli is March 31, and is traditionally celebrated by acts of mischief. In France, a fool is sometimes called a "poisson d'Avril" (April fish). In Scotland, a fool is called an "April gowk" or "April cuckoo."

Another story goes that April Fools Day started back when the Roman Empire changed the calendar. In the early Roman calendar, April 1 was the first day of spring, the spring equinox. Prior to 154 B.C., it was New Year's Day.

Many celebrations of many cultures observed this day as the coming of the renewal of the earth and life. There would be sacrifices and gifts given to the gods.

In Roman legend, Pluto carried

Proserpina off from the Elysian meadows, leaving her mother Ceres on a fools errand, chasing only the echo of her daughter's pleas for help.

When the new year was changed to January, they called the people who continued to celebrate the new year in April, "April fools."

So, here we go. The National Enquirer is currently scoping a new West Coast location in the face of mounting governmental regulation in Florida. We think they should take over College Grove, but the latest is the Padres are considering their own stadium, and the Marketplace at the Grove site is on the short list of possibilities.

Another potential headquarters is the La Mesa Chamber of Commerce building, soon to be vacated. In honor of the relocation, we've published an East County version of the Enquirer.

Personal comments of Mayor Mary Sessom

Do you recall the first time you really learned about bank accounts and budgets? I do. I was a freshman in college and had a vague idea that there had to be money in your checking account before you could write a check. I did not, however, realize that overdraft protection had its limits.

The city of Lemon Grove has been in the business of putting together budgets and managing its bank accounts for over 20 years. This year something new is being tried - performance based budgeting. This type of budgeting does what its name suggests - measures performance. The performance being measured is that of the city government. The measurements are based on data that describes how the city has performed in reaching its goals. If it is done correctly, the budget document will help the city council make better decisions and allocate resources more efficiently.

The compilation of the information for this budget requires input from city hall staff, the city council and Lemon Grove citizens. Staff and council have both the business and residential sectors, to come forward and participate. A town hall meeting has been scheduled for this purpose on May 6, between 6 and 9 p.m. at Lemon Grove Middle School. Your attendance will be greatly appreciated. All you will need to bring are your thoughts regarding the services you want the city to provide and your basic understanding of bank accounts and budgets. Please call me (464-6934) if you need any information before May 6.

City council meeting are the 1st and 3rd Tuesdays of the month at 7 p.m. in the Community Center, 3146 School Ln.

Lemon Twist

by Cheryl Cohen

Were you running a business in Lemon Grove in 1977 when the city incorporated? Regardless of whether the business is still operating, the owners have retired, the business has been relocated, or was taken over by Peruvian rebels, the Lemon Grove 20th Anniversary Committee wishes to honor those who were part of the local economy 20 years ago when Lemon Grove finally incorporated after a 22-year battle for cityhood. Call the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce at 469-9621 as soon as possible and state the name, address, and contact person of the business. Intimidated by answering machines? You can mail the information to the chamber, at 3443 Main Street, Lemon Grove, CA 91945. The anniversary celebration officially kicks off on Lemon Grove Old Time Days, May 9 - 10, and runs through the fiscal year 1997-98.

It was indeed fortunate for me that the preceding request was faxed in, because it left things wide open for me to interrupt with this public service announcement: The 20th Anniversary Party Committee thinks it knows what it is now, after our latest meeting on Mar. 26. It only took an hour and a half for us to recover and regain our bearings after reading an internal memorandum from City Manager Doug Yount. The memo detailed ten very good ideas regarding possible events for the anniversary year's celebrations, passed on to him from council members and other members of the community. The last part, however, stumped us beyond belief. It said, "Regarding the role of the committee, it is my understanding that the direction of the council is for this committee to provide the following services to the council: 1) Present to the council before Old Time Days a list of desired events to commemorate the 20th anniversary of the city. These events would be throughout the entire anniversary year of the city, July 1, 1997 to June 30, 1998. 2) Plan and organize those events approved by council in item 1." Holy Moly! What nine people had volunteered to do for one anniversary party, had suddenly taken on the responsibilities of a year-long commitment ... or did it? Although each of the ideas presented had great merit, the party wasn't even listed among them, and the word "party" had suddenly disappeared from the title of the committee as Doug Yount "understood" it. Everyone spent the next hour or so discussing what we were supposed to be doing. Well, fortunately, my eagle eyes immediately flew to the words "possible", "recommendation", and "ideas", as my way out of something for which I knew I wouldn't have time available for more than one party's worth. Heck, even the half-life of one of my sweaty-palmed romances is only 90 days or so: how could I promise an entire year of commitment? I had to speak up. "Uh ... nowhere here do I see the word (E)mandate, ... I don't think we have to do all these things," I shrugged. Several people's heads bobbed up and down in agreement. But, good ol' Craig Lake just had to thwart my efforts to wheedle out of further involvement. He started talking about the party committee becoming some subcommittee of a steering committee, and then he even started drawing organizational charts on the white board. "What is he, John Madden, or something?", I thought to myself. I felt a rash coming on, until finally all of the rest of the group spoke up and said that they weren't prepared for that kind of time frame, either. Well, almost all of us. Goody-two-shoes Lake, said he was willing to commit for the entire year. The rest of us were tempted to oblige and commit him ... somewhere ... or maybe even to volunteer for more tasks on a per-event-basis, to save looking at that chart. What I did learn from the meeting, is that the music I was trolling for in my previous column may not be needed for the party, but may be needed for some other anniversary event later on, such as one of the "concerts in the park" series, so younger musicians could be involved now. Another job of mine, was to write an anecdotal history of Lemon Grove's past 20 years. Naahh, they don't want that anymore, either. In the meantime, there'll be another meeting of the party (sub)committee of the steering committee on April 2. Meanwhile, rest assured that this paper will contribute mightily with a special 20th anniversary edition, where my anecdotes may even be used.

Be daring. Be bold. Be whomever you want, but send your press releases, special event announcements, and bets on how long you think I'll last on the committee to The Review, or directly to me at 264-3153 (msg), 264-4180 (fax), or cirious@cts.com (internet).

Members of Citizens Looking for the Truth Regarding the Grossmont/Fletcher Hills Water Tank (CLFTRGFHWT) now claim the Department of Defense is warehousing the frozen bodies of aliens inside the Grossmont/Fletcher Hills water tank.

The grassroots neighborhood group was originally formed to paint the metallic, rust-colored eyesore a nice baby-blue in the middle of the night. The covert painting crew, however, encountered mysterious activities at the site and abandoned their mission.

"We discovered an intricate system of wires, computer chips and miniature amplifiers housed in the odd-shaped roof of the new tank," said Bob Lazar, an engineer formerly employed at Area 51 and vice president of CLFTRGFHWT. "But the biggest tipoff was an Air Force crew unloading 5-foot-long cylinders from vehicles with New Mexico plates."

Lazar said he and CLFTRGFHWT treasurer, Brakish Okun, an unemployed software designer from Boswell, N.M., found a relay system transmitting signals into space at the rate of 3,658,947 per second when they climbed to the top on makeshift ladders.

The stainless steel clouds that purportedly were added as an artistic endeavor by Grossmont College students are actually solar panels that collect energy which is then transferred to the dual-purpose legs of the tank, which also house storage batteries. Lazar said that within 13 minutes, the panels can be reversed to act as landing beacons for any alien craft.

CLFTRGFHWT claims that no environmental impact report was ever issued on the water tank and no studies were conducted to discover if the high frequency transmissions might affect the people living below. However, residents of La Mesa, El Cajon and Santee have been drinking excellent-tasting water filtered through electromagnetic chambers that appear to generate a gravity field.

"We found the water really tasty," said Okun.

Defense Department and NASA spokespersons deny any knowledge of the Grossmont/Fletcher Hills tank and would neither confirm or deny reports of alien remains recovered from a flying saucer crash in Boswell. Helix Water District General Manager J. Allen Friedgen said that although he knows of no unusual technology at the water tank site, he has been fascinated by UFO coverup theories for some time.

"I understand that the continental United States is littered with mysterious equipment in a wide variety of disguises," he said. "In Texas, oil rigs are frequently used and in Los Angeles, rusty old Cadillacs are the vehicle of choice."

Members of CLFTRGFHWT say if the water districts

Cookin' Corner

Pudding Del Fuego

Preparation time: 45 minutes
Cooking time: 20 minutes Serves 39.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 1 lb. chunked alien loin | 1/2 c. white vinegar |
| 1 lb. chunked believer containers, well-drained | 1/2 c. Prestone antifreeze |
| 4 whole fresh floppy disks, peeled, seeded, diced | 1/4 c. Sterno jellied cooking fuel |
| 1 tsp ground cumin | 3 rolls Sharpshooter cap pistol caps |
| 1 tsp crushed oregano | 1 4 oz. can Vasco de Gama green chilis |
| 1 tsp salt | 3 fresh Anaheim "Sum bitch" green chili peppers |
| 1 tsp freshly ground black pepper | 4 tbsp olive, vegetable, or peanut oil |
| 1 tsp mild Peruvian chili powder | 4 tsp 3-in-1 oil |
| 1 tsp medium New Mexico chili powder | Dash Drano |
| 1 tsp Ay Carumba chili powder | 1 pack matches |
| 3 tsp Emiliano Zapata tabasco sauce | 1 c. tap water |
| 1 4 oz. can Comet scouring powder | 1 c. heavy water (deuterium oxide) |
| 5 .38-ca. Remington Standard bullets | Sulfuric acid to taste |

Have the butcher coarse-grind the loin and containers (keep any ground bones for garnish). With an ordinary household set of pliers, extract the lead slugs from the bullets, saving the gunpowder. Discard the slugs and shells. Fine-shred the rolls of caps in a food processor or by hand. Be sure not to get any water on the caps.

Sauté the meat in the cooking oil. Add the cumin, salt, pepper, oregano, vinegar, and scouring powder. Let simmer until the scouring powder turns a bright green and begins to make odd noises.

In a large pot, combine the floppies, tabasco, antifreeze, Sterno, and both canned and fresh green chilis while still in the pot. In a small bowl, mix the 3-in-1 oil with the shredded caps. Chop off the heads from the matches and sprinkle the into the mixture. Discard the rest of the matches. Blend.

Add the tap water and the heavy water to the meat and scouring powder mixture (Note - heavy water may be ordered by mail from Harry the Night Watchman, second desk from the Right, Auxiliary Security Station, San Onofre, CA)

Combine all ingredients in a large pot, taking care to blend the chili powders in very well. Let simmer for three hours, stirring constantly. Add Drano, sulfuric acid to taste. Serve in a warmed bowl, garnished with ground bones, parsley, chopped raw onion, or thumb tacks dipped in benzene.

SEINFELD DATING MONTE VISTA SOPHOMORE

Weekends are like a fantasy-land romance right out of the "Seinfeld" show for Monte Vista cheerleader Rachel Lowenstein.

None other than Jerry Seinfeld himself has taken an interest in the 16-year-old sophomore, ever since they met at the San Diego Wild Animal Park during Christmas break.

Most weekends, after shooting episodes for the eighth season of the popular NBC sitcom, Seinfeld will land his personal Lear jet in a Rancho San Diego corn field and meet Lowenstein for jaunts to Jamul and Dehesa.

Lowenstein declined interviews, but close friends assert that Seinfeld is a gentleman.

"Like, he insisted that he meet Rachel's dad like right away," said Nora Zimmerman, another Monte Vista cheerleader. "But Rachel can take care of herself. She may be young, but she's big for her age."

Seinfeld has taken Lowenstein to the San Diego Zoo and Sea World. The pair have also been spotted at Chuck E. Cheese and PlayCo Toys.

Zimmerman said that although the 41-year-old comedian seems to have plenty of money, he's very concerned that Lowenstein is charged child's admission rates.

"He told someone at a movie theater that Rachel was only 12," Zimmerman said. "Rachel said the guy didn't believe Jerry — Rachel's pretty mature for her age — but he charged him less anyway."

Aimee Mendez, also of Monte Vista, said Lowenstein did know who Seinfeld was when they first met at the Wild Animal Park.

Lowenstein's parents claim "Seinfeld" comes on after Rachel's bedtime, Mendez said.

"Like, she'd never really seen his show, but I think he, like, kinda liked that, you know," she added.

Lowenstein's friends claim that Seinfeld has plans to drop in at a Monte Vista home game sometime during his show's hiatus.

IRS TO ADDRESS CALENDAR QUIRKS

The Internal Revenue Service has announced an extension of its normal April 15 deadline for residents to submit all IRS forms and money.

According to the international director of the IRS, "Since the 15th falls on the third Tuesday of the month, and banks and post offices will be closed, it seemed only fair to allow all taxpayers an additional week to finish filing their forms."

This is good news, especially for those with students in the home since calendar fluctuations delivered spring breaks about a month earlier than usual this year. Parents had to deal with youngsters at home when they should have been reconciling all their old bank statements.

Paperwork and children just do not mix well, so the unprecedented ed reprieve was heralded by the Parent Teachers Associations of the Americas.

Their spokesperson held a press conference and tearfully praised the decision saying, "This extension has delivered our children from a fate worse than moms with PMS. It's given them a chance to have a wonderful vacation from school free from outrageous, stress-induced parental behavior. Studies from previous years show that fathers facing IRS deadlines become barbarians."

Also at the press conference,

Warner Hogarthe, school superintendent announced, "As a district, we are committed to seeing all of our teachers do the best they can do at home and at school. Therefore we have decided to give everyone a double spring break. The first holiday will be to enjoy themselves and relax."

Hogarthe pleaded for parent volunteers to take over the classrooms for a week saying that staff and administrative personnel were not capable of shouldering the entire burden.

Letters to the Editor

I like Betty Jo

Jerry Hermes laments "the useless waste of column inches" in referring to Betty Jo Tucker's "Family Movie Guide." ["Movie guide Pointless Drivel", March 13 issue] Yet the drivel Mr. Hermes wrote wasted even more space than that allotted to Ms. Tucker.

If Mr. Hermes had stopped ranting and raving about something which, in the scheme of things, is inconsequential, and took the time to read what he wrote, he might have chopped out some space wasting words.

He cites the Star Wars Trilogy

as an example. Sure those films are well known. Most people are aware that these films contain some violence. And most people know that movies about Howard Stern and Larry Flynt contain material unsuitable for children.

However, many films, especially early in their release, are not as well known to the general public. Here a little extra parental guidance is appreciated by those of us who don't have internet access, or who are working when Joel Seigel and Gene Shalit give their morning reviews, and who choose to spend time with our children rather than watch Channel 51 news. We "knuckleheads," as Mr. Hermes calls us, prefer to read Betty Jo Tucker's straight forward reviews than to wade through David Elliot's snob-appeal babble.

And yes, Ms. Tucker's columns and ratings are subjective. That's the point of reviews. That's why one critic gives a movie the highest rating while another gives it a dog. That's why we read different reviews. When, over time, we find a critic who has proven to share our tastes, we tend to respect his/her opinion more than someone else's.

Oh, and "Duh!" doesn't the so well informed Mr. Hermes know studios have press screenings? Critics often see a film weeks before its release. So yes, at the time of the writing of Ms. Tucker's column, she certainly could have and no doubt had seen "Private Parts."

Betty Jo Tucker's movie reviews and Family Movie Guides do add to our knowledge and information and enhance the quality of your newspaper.

of trees and little tillable land which placed it lowest of importance to the whole 160 acres. On our farm in Michigan, it supplied the best hunting, and the source of firewood both for cooking and heating in the winter. The cutting was done by the men, and the splitting was relegated to the boys. Though not as productive as the fields of hay and grain, the back forty was a very necessary part of the farm.

Lastly, I never did write an ode to greenery, but did once write an "Ode to an Egg" for my high school newspaper. It never did achieve the recognition to the odes to a mouse, and a louse, by my namesake, but it was a hit at Grand Rapids Union High in 1940.

Turnips are usually considered to be one of, if not the lowest of the vegetable family. With the possible push by what I know as a "beggie" (rutabaga), the turnip was what went into the pot if there was nothing else. Thus, harvesting turnips, and riding the turnip truck I assume, denoted a position that did not require a high intellect or accomplishment skill. To fall off, meant a questionable qualification to be even there.

The "back forty" refers to a forty acre parcel of land on a homestead. It usually had a stand
